Technical Information

Cymbopogon, better known as lemongrass is a genus of Asian, African, Australian, in Central-Southern Italy and tropical island plants in the grass family. Some species (particularly Cymbopogon Citratus), are commonly cultivated as culinary and medicinal herbs because of their scent, resembling that of lemons (Citrus limon). Common names include lemon grass, lemongrass, barbed wire grass, silky heads, Citronella grass and many others names. Lemongrass is usually planted in home gardens to ward off insects such as flies, mosquitos and other insects. Its cultivation enables growing some vegetables (such as tomatoes and broccoli) without applying pesticides. There are many species of lemon grass but those commercially most important are two: Cymbopogon nardus and Cymbopogon winterianus. From these two species can be extracted from the stem and leaves the oil of Lemongrass, Citronella, Citronellol and Geraniol or richness, substances used as insect repellents and particularly for mosquitoes!
